

Who are you? And don't answer this question by giving your name . . .

Who are you, really? What makes you . . . you? What defines your identity? What image do you project? What separates you from the 6.7 billion other people on this planet?

What about you tells the world you're different? That you're valuable? That you have a purpose?

Is it your looks? Your talents? Your intellect? Your passions? Your bank account?

Or, is it something else . . . something more meaningful? Something more spiritual?

Are you the source of your identity? Or is He?

Is your identity wrapped up in you? Or in Him?

With every day that goes by, you make decisions, choices that determine who you are and who you will be. You are growing . . . physically . . . mentally . . . spiritually . . .

You are BECOMING.

More like Him? Or more like the world . . .

The question is: who are you becoming?
