

LEGALIST

- If you treat your relationship with God like a ladder you have to climb by good works, you might be a legalist.
- If you believe God loves you, but He doesn't like you very much, you might be a legalist.
- If you judge your intimacy with God by how well you do in one or two key areas of your life, you might be a legalist.
- If you try to use your obedience as leverage for the blessings of God, you might be a legalist.
- If you take more pride in your own righteousness than in what Jesus has done for you, you might be a legalist.
- If you say, "I'm sorry," to God after sinning by doing good things, you might be a legalist.
- If you consistently compare your obedience level to the obedience of others, you might be a legalist.
- If you believe the depth of your spirituality is measured by the amount of highlighting in your Bible, you might be a legalist.
- If you check off the number of prayers you pray each day, you might be a legalist.
